Dave Hinnenkamp
KDV Wealth Management CEO
July 17, 2007

In today's volatile economy, the steady hand of a practiced partner can be your most valuable asset. You want confidence that your investment adviser will stay the course.

That's exactly what you get from KDV Wealth Management. We're committed to your success. Most importantly, you'll benefit from our signature personalized service.

On July 17, KDV Wealth Management CEO Dave Hinnenkamp lent his expertise to Bloomberg Radio, explaining that ...

- The market gains that day were fueled by a Producer Price Index (PPI) report that indicated no immediate concerns about inflation or rising interest rates.
- The 14,000 figure the market briefly reached is only a symbolic number. Investors likely remembered the stretch between 2000 and 2002 and took some money off the table – which isn't necessarily a bad thing.
- Market gains are likely to continue because the aggregate demand is there and the supply chain can meet those demands without pricing pressures.
- Given the elevated levels of existing homes and the recent tightening of lending standards, it suggests it will take some time before the housing market concerns caused by the subprime meltdown are equalized.
